THE FORMER Governor warned that our foreign policy during recent years has proved ineffective.

"We should give pause to think that even with the expenditure of this tremendous amount of money in economic and military aid to some 70 nations," he continued, "Communist Russia has extended its dictatorship over nearly a billion people comprising one-third of the world's population and embracing in territory over one-fourth of the earth's surface.

THE FORMER Governor warned that our foreign policy during recent years has proved ineffective.

"We should give pause to think that even with the expenditure of this tremendous amount of money in economic and military aid to some 70 nations," he continued, "Communist Russia has extended its dictatorship over nearly a billion people comprising one-third of the world's population and embracing in territory over one-fourth of the earth's surface.

"In fact, more than 700 million people have fallen under the Red yoke of tyranny since World War II. And, at the same time, Russia and its satellites still have a three-to-one edge over the free world in military ground forces and reputedly are closing the gap between it and the United States in air power and atomic weapons."

Talmadge declared that reports made to Congress recently by the Comptroller-General of the United States prove what many Americans have known or suspected all along.

"BILLIONS IN U. S. taxpayers' money have been squandered overseas on absurd and impractical projects of little or no value to this country or the recipient nation and carried out with little or no supervision or control," he pointed out. "In some instances, there has been no assurance that this money went for the purposes intended.

"Official audits have raised objections to the fact that adequate records have not been maintained despite the large amounts of money involved. Contracts for equipment and construction have been awarded to the highest instead of the lowest bidders or have been handed out on a cost-plus basis. Even worse, American firms and businessmen have been denied an opportunity to bid. Following these policies, there has been endless opportunity for corruption and irregularities.

"Evidence presented in audits of the Comptroller General on foreign economic aid assistance projects demonstrates conclusively that in several cited instances the expenditures were of no ascertainable benefit to the recipient nation and no satisfactory evidence was available tending to show how money spent in this manner promoted the economic or military security of the United States."

HOWEVER, IT IS evident, Talmadge declared, that U. S. funds have been utilized in many instances to increase by vast proportions both the agricultural and industrial productive capacity of other countries, thus putting them into competition with American farmers, businessmen and manufacturers for world markets.

"In fact," he elaborated, "millions upon millions of acres of cotton and tobacco production have been added at our expense in foreign countries. And all of this has been done while acreage allotments for American farmers have been cut year after year and domestic and world prices for farm commodities have declined steadily.

"This doesn't make sense to me."

TALMADGE LASHED out at the proposed construction of the Aswan Dam on the Nile River in Egypt. He said the United States has provided funds for preliminary engineering work on the project and that, if constructed, it would add the production of several million acres of new cotton land cultivated with slave-wage labor to the already-glutted world supply. He expressed the hope that the United States Department of State will stand by its present announcement that it will go no further in using American funds for this undertaking.

"The time is at hand when we must cease doing for foreign nations what we are unable or unwilling to do for our own people here at home," he stated. "We must seek the elimination of purely economic aid to foreign nations as soon as practicable and possible and at the same time, give a thorough and sifting examination to each and every foreign military assistance project to insure that the free world benefits from it and that the overburdened American taxpayer gets his money's worth in national security."

The Speaker called for greater use of American surplus farm commodities in U. S. assistance programs in place of outright economic aid.

IN HIS earlier address at the dedication of Pineview General Hospital, Talmadge pledged that, as a United States Senator, he would "never vote for any federal program of any kind which attempts to deny to the people local control over its operation." He praised doctors and nurses for the fight they have waged against socialized medicine and declared that if it is to be prevented it is necessary that adequate hospital and health center facilities be provided.

"My father once told me his definition of socialized medicine," the Former Governor related. "He said: 'Socialized medicine is political medicine and I don't want any politician cutting on me.'" campaign and a landslide election on September 12th."

The Brotherhood and its Auxiliary have some 5,000 members in Georgia.

Farm Slump—

War, the gap has been widening ever since," the Former Chief Executive continued. "While operating costs have increased 12 per cent over the 1947-49 official index, prices received from farm produce have dropped 13 per cent under the 1947-49 level. That means the farmer is trying to stay in business with a 25 per cent spread between the prices he receives for his produce and the cost of the goods and materials he has to buy to operate his farm.

"It is no wonder that we see more and more people move into the towns and cities and abandon their farms to the plum and sassafras bushes. And this is a trend which, if left unchecked, will spell doom for the small farmer who cannot indefinitely continue to tighten his belt year after year."

TALMADGE CHARGED that the Administration in Washington has "done nothing realistic" to remedy the situation and that the only program it has proposed is "one of trying to plow under two million small farmers and hoping the rest can make a living." He said it not only is foolish and unrealistic but also "actually economically dangerous" for the Government to take the position that the farmer can operate unassisted in a subsidized economy.

"I am enough of an old-fashioned Jeffersonian Democrat to believe that all of us would be better off if Government would just leave everyone alone and let everything seek its own level," he continued. "However, at the same time, I am realistic enough to understand that when everyone else in our economy receives a subsidy in one form or another from our National Government that our farmers cannot be the only people left to 'root hog or die'."

The Former Governor called for an immediate return to rigid price supports of "not less than 90 per cent for basic farm commodities" and the inauguration of a program of price supports for livestock to guarantee that "farmers will not go bankrupt trying to sell their livestock when hogs get down to 10 cents a pound like they did last Fall." Only in so doing, Talmadge contended, can the nation halt the ruination of its agricultural economy and restore to its farmers "their fair share of the national income."

Furthermore, he maintained, the United States must "abandon the idea our State Department has that we ought not to sell our agricultural products overseas because we might make some neutralist nation mad." Because of this attitude, he pointed out, this country is losing will record rural electrification as "one of the greatest achievements of this country."

Talmadge's address was preceded by a big barbecue.

Talmadge Critics Will Turn, Johnson Says

VALDOSTA, Ga. —Critics of Former Governor Talmadge "who denounce him so bitterly today will acclaim him as a spokesman for constitutional government" within the next few years, Country Johnston, president of the Lowndes County Talmadge for Senate Club and county commissioner-elect, predicted here last week.

Introducing the Former Governor at the rally and chicken supper held here in his honor July 25, Mr. Johnston declared:

"As Governor of Georgia for six years, Herman Talmadge planned his Administration with unusual foresight and executed these plans with great administrative ability and determination. His Administration was greater—immeasurably greater—than any of his illustrious predecessors. It was an Administration that benefited and enriched the lives of all Georgians.

"This brilliant Georgian has a deep, sincere respect for constitutional government, for the rights of the individual states and for local self-government.

"Men of wisdom and great intellectual ability formed this Republic. It will take men of equal wisdom and of no less intellectual ability to preserve our system of individual freedom. This Georgian will protect his people from the tyranny of a strong, ever-engulfing, centralized government.

"The Supreme Court in recent years has rendered decisions not based upon law, but on political expediency, thereby changing this sacred document not by constitutional methods as provided by the Constitution itself, but by the liberal political philosophy of its members.

"Our candidate for the United States Senate will oppose with great vigor and all his ability the invasion by the Court of the rights that belong to the legislative branch of our Government. Within a few years his enemies who denounce him so bitterly today will acclaim him as a spokesman for constitutional government.

"In speaking the sentiments of his people, he will make no apologies to anyone save his own conscience. There is neither fear nor timidity in the heart of this brave Georgian. He will be unafraid to defend the social customs and the traditions of her people—a people who honor constitutional government equally as much as, if not more than, the people of any section of America.

"This distinguished Georgian will use his personality, his great intellect, and his good character—this moral and spiritual force will be used to maintain America's position of world leadership in the family of nations."

In short, Talmadge's real challenge is to carry all 159 counties.

Ten Reasons Why Herman Talmadge Will Be Elected

(THE ALTAMAHA PILOT, Glennville)

Herman E. Talmadge will be elected U. S. Senator because of the ten following mighty good reasons:

1. Reared on a farm in Telfair County, he plowed many a day and was a member of a 4-H Club and FFA. He knows the farmer's problems and is still a farmer, selling hams, cattle, etc.
2. The South will need a good debator in the Senate. Talmadge was a member of the University of Georgia Debating Team five years or every year he was there. It takes a good debator to be thusly honored.
3. He offered all he had during World War II. He volunteered and spent 52 months in uniform and was honorably discharged as a Naval Lieutenant Commander, having had part in the invasion of Guadalcanal, Battle of Okinawa and others. He helped many a disabled veteran while he was Governor. He's still the veterans' friend.
4. Every time he ran for Governor he carried the State by a big majority of the popular vote and the unit vote.
5. During his six years as Governor more money was appropriated to education than during all previous administrations and teachers, white and colored, began receiving equal pay increases for equal qualifications, all school facilities improved and new buildings erected. This was quite a lift for the Georgia school system.
6. $365 million were spent on new public roads and highways.
7. $100 million were spent on new hospitals, health centers and institutional buildings and much outlays for farm markets ,etc.
8. The Georgia forestry program took her from the bottom to the top of the list of every state in that line.
9. Georgia's industrial expansion put her ahead of all Southern States in new plants established in 1953.
10. And, above all else, Talmadge is considered a rallying force in the fight to preserve traditional American liberties and constitutional, self-government.

Provide Equal Aid For All

(THE ATLANTA JOURNAL)

Former Gov. Talmadge is advocating an adjustment of welfare assistance payments. Speaking in Macon, at dedication of a new 200-bed addition to Macon Hospital, Mr. Talmadge called for a fair and proper revision of these payments.

The Former Governor pointed out the disparity of pension payments to men and women in different states. The payments are not based on the needs of individuals, which everywhere are virtually the same, but on the wealth and resources of the various states.

Mr. Talmadge said: "The richer states are able to put up almost unlimited amounts in matching federal funds while the less wealthy states cannot hope to keep pace."

Some persons will say that the Former Governor of Georgia is plugging for more money for the needy of his own State. This is true; but along with aid for needy Georgians would go benefits to all needy men and women everywhere.

Mr. Talmadge is in a senatorial race and anything he says at present has political implications. But this particular speech rises above the political and becomes a proper plea for all men and women who must have welfare aid.

It is a praiseworthy point, and, politics aside, Mr. Talmadge deserves thanks for it.

It Is A Popular Promise

(THE MOULTRIE OBSERVER)

Herman Talmadge, in opening his campaign for U. S. Senate on July Fourth in Rome, hit a key which is bound to receive strong chorus support from state, county and municipal officers as well as the general voting public. He pledges himself to work unceasingly to curb the powers of the Supreme Court in matters which should be handled within the individual states of the nation.

Talmadge, as expected, hit vigorously at the Supreme Court's anti-segregation ruling. Yet his remarks were more inclusive than the court's desegregation decision, for they took in all matters which involve "states' rights."

One of the major principles embodied in the creation of a union of states was protection of the rights of states to handle problems peculiar to them and their people, and to administer the functions of government with minimum interference from the federal government.

Talmadge promised to work for laws setting forth minimum qualifications for the office of Supreme Court justice and to give back to the 48 states their powers to "regulate all matters pertaining to education and their other purely internal affairs."

Anyone who has a working knowledge of federal operations within the past 20 years will recognize the growing power of the federal government over affairs formerly allocated to the states. Most of the federal funds poured into the states have strings attached, thus giving the federal government strong control over states, counties and municipalities.

Talmadge's pledge to work for a reversal in the "federalizing" trend will receive popular support, not only in Georgia but in many of the other states.

(THE GRIFFIN DAILY NEWS)

M. E. Thompson has announced an 18-plank platform in his race against Herman Talmadge for the United States Senate.

Briefly summarized, he is opposed to Talmadge and in favor of people voting for Thompson. He also is opposed to sin and in favor of gettting himself elected.

We join him in being opposed to sin.

Friends Cheer—

SEATED ON THE platform with Talmadge at the evening rally held on the grounds of the Lowndes County Livestock Auditorium were 55 officials and leaders representing virtually all neighboring counties. State Senator-Elect John Langdale of Valdosta was master of ceremonies and Lowndes County Commissioner-Elect Country Johnston, president of the Lowndes County Talmadge Club, introduced the Former Governor.

The crowd was estimated by Sheriff Futch at 5,000. He said it was "one of the largest" political assemblages he ever had seen in Lowndes County.

Talmadge supporters came to the rally by motorcade from throughout South Georgia. One of the largest motorcades was a 62-car procession from Brooks County.

AMONG THE dignitaries who shared the platform with the Senatorial Candidate were:

State Representatives Robert E. Chastain of Thomas County, John Sheffield of Brooks County, Warren Moorman of Lanier County and D. D. Hudson of Irwin County; State Representative-Elect Roger Budd of Lowndes County, secretary of the Lowndes County Talmadge Club; Sheriffs Bill Smith of Echols County, Dick Jones of Brooks County, C. A. Vittum of Cook County, and Futch; State Senator J. L. Wetherington of Echols County;

County Commissioners J. C. Padgett, Homer Howard, Ralph Patrick and Owen Cooper, all of Brooks County; J. T. Riggins and Grover B. Lee of Clinch County; and George Shelton of Lowndes County; County Commissioners-Elect J. L. Spivey, Perry Fields and Johnston of Lowndes County; Mayors L. W. DeVane of Adel, Roger Webb of Nashville and Bass of Valdosta; Superior Court Judges J. Bowie Gray of the Tifton Judicial Circuit and George Lilly of the Southern Judicial Circuit;

Superior Court Clerks Emory Bowers of Brooks County, Henry Bostick of Tift County, Perry Harris of Berrien County and A. W. Touchton of Echols County; Brooks County Ordinary L. A. Wagnon; Judge T. Guy Connell of the Valdosta City Court; Valdosta City Councilmen Leslie Davis and Dr. Harry Mixson; Lowndes County School Superintendent-Elect Clyde Meacham; Lowndes County Coroner-Elect Jeff Bonner; State Senator-Elect Langdale of Lowndes County; Judge Langdale; Henry Tart of Valdosta, treasurer of the Lowndes County Talmadge Club; and Valdosta Civic Leaders John O'Neal and Henry Tillman.

A free chicken supper was served to all attending following the rally. The meal was served under the supervision of Carroll P. Scruggs, Marion P. Tucker, Bob Hall, R. E. Patrick, A. J. Strickland III, A. B. Sowell, Clyde Guest, E. J. Crocker and T. J. Luke.

Talmadge Will Carry Every County, John Langdale Predicts

VALDOSTA, Ga. — The prediction that Former Governor Herman E. Talmadge will carry every county in Georgia in his campaign for nomination to the United States Senate brought cheers from the crowd of 5,000 supporters which attended a rally in his honor here last week.

State Senator-Elect John Langdale, who was master of ceremonies, made the forecast. He declared:

"Every county in the State is going for Herman Talmadge on September 12th and Lowndes County will not be left out."

From what we can learn from traveling people, Thompson's race for the Senate is looked upon by the people as a joke.—The Banks County Journal, Homer.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor
The Statesman

A great choice must be made on Sept. 12, 1956, for a U. S. Senator to represent Georgia in Washington.

There is none better qualified than Herman E. Talmadge. None loves his native State of Georgia better than he, Talmadge. His record as Governor proves that he has ample ability to push our State to the front.

We believe that qualified voters in Georgia should vote for Talmadge, the best prepared man in the State.

We should support Talmadge because he is one of the best constitutional lawyers in the South and a gerat historian. He has taken a stand against outsiders when they meddled in things that were none of their business. He will continue to fight for states' rights and segregation in the public schools. He will make an effort to set aside the ruling of the Supreme Court with reference to its decision on integrating the races in our schools.

These reasons should obligate us to elect Talmadge.

Talmadge will take a stand for the best interests of the whole nation as well as for his own State and section. His power will be felt in the U. S. Senate.

This is why we are going to vote for him.

So let's hurry up the days and see to it that Mr. Thompson gets such a whipping at the polls that in future he will stay home and be a good boy.

Georgians believe Herman Talmadge will fight for Georgians rather than for people in other parts of the world. The people of Georgia have as great and as many problems as people of other countries and they feel that they are now due some consideration.—The Royston Record.

Former Governor Herman Talmadge is shown above as he spoke at the dedication of the new State Labor Building in Atlanta on Monday, July 16. Thompson's Charges

(THE AUGUSTA HERALD)

Former Gov. M. E. Thompson has been out of active politics so long that he seems not to have sensed the change that has swept over public opinion in recent months. He discloses this clearly by attempting to win votes in the Senate race by labeling Herman Talmadge as an "isolationist." By using that word in his comments on Talmadge's Fourth of July speech in Rome, Thompson made it clear that he belongs with the crowd that believes in giving away American money in vast amounts to foreign countries.

This will undoubtedly cost him votes as Georgians are no longer willing to endorse an unrestricted foreign aid program that is governed by neither common sense nor a proper regard for the rights of the American people. If devotion to their own country and a desire for the preservation of American security at home makes them "isolationists," they are willing to accept that label and make it a synonym for patriotism and pride in the United States.

Thompson's answer to Talmadge's speech at Rome was one of the weakest challenges to an opponent yet made in the history of Georgia politics. It lacked fighting force and dealt in vague generalities, some of which puzzled Georgians.

Thompson charges, for instance, that Talmadge is connected with a "monopoly", which, it is alleged, controls Republican and Democratic politics in Georgia.

He certainly missed the mark on that one because the one apparent fact in Georgia today is that Georgians do not intend to be controlled by either the Democratic or the Republican Party. The people are seeking leadership that will place them solidly behind tried-out American principles. They are tired of pressure that seeks to mobilize them behind foolish innovations in government. They want to return to the security of the written law of the nation as embodied in the Constitution of the United States. They want to feel that they, as citizens, still have the right of ordering their own affairs. They want leadership that will speak and act for them in militant fashion in the increasingly [illegible] constitutional law and the rights of the states.

answer his call by an overwhelming vote in his favor that will show the nation that Georgia is behind him as he takes up that fight from the floor of the U. S. Senate.

Thompson Headed Toward Obscurity

(THE COLUMBUS ENQUIRER)

Three strikes is out in any league!

M. E. Thompson has friends throughout the State. But many of them will not vote for him at this time. He carries no special appeal to the voters of Georgia in this campaign. There was no demand for him to step forward and oppose the man, thought by many to be heading toward victory while Senator George was still in the race, and there has not been the slightest indication of enthusiasm over his announcement that he would oppose Mr. Talmadge.

In addition to the dyed-in-the-wool Talmadge supporters, there is a sector of the electorate composed of those who have not waved the Talmadge banner before but who feel that the Former Governor would make a good Senator. Some of these may not be in 100 per cent agreement with Mr. Talmadge on some of the planks of his platform but are for him nevertheless.

Having cast our lot with Senator George, this newspaper was keenly disappointed that he decided to withdraw from the race. From what we have heard since, however, we wonder if the distinguished Senator could have won the race. On the basis of the reports we have heard since the withdrawal of the Senator, we are inclined to the opinion he might have been defeated if he had remained in the race.

If Senator George couldn't have beaten Talmadge, what chance does Thompson have?

It seems to us that the former acting governor is letting his personal ambition lead him into political disaster. If he doesn't win this time—and there doesn't seem to be the remotest chance that he will come close to getting the Senatorial nomination—he will be as dead as a doornail in Georgia politics. Indeed, that seems to be his status at the moment.

SMALL FARMERS

(THE NORTHEAST GEORGIAN)

Former Governor Herman Talmadge in a recent speech re-affirmed one stand he will take when he goes to the U. S. Senate. He will wage a campaign for the small farmers.

To those of us who have lived a reasonable time, the disappearance of the small farmers is a matter of grave concern. The drift of our economy has been toward large scale production and more and more costly use of mechanized implements. The small farmer, unless some of his family work in industry, is a doomed man.

There are things which our national law-makers forget. They, embroiled in the vast spending sprees, which concern mass production, ignore individual effort. In truth, the only use of money, is to make our people happy. Our small farmers, as a class were probably our most "happy" people. They did not have so many good roads, automobiles and gadgets but they did have enjoyment of a good home life. It is a shame that modern tendencies are forcing well adjusted and strong people out of existence.

Therefore, we hope, in this instance that Talmadge will have a strong voice.

longs with the crowd that believes in giving away American money in vast amounts to foreign countries.

This will undoubtedly cost him votes as Georgians are no longer willing to endorse an unrestricted foreign aid program that is governed by neither common sense nor a proper regard for the rights of the American people. If devotion to their own country and a desire for the preservation of American security at home makes them "isolationists," they are willing to accept that label and make it a synonym for patriotism and pride in the United States.

Thompson's answer to Talmadge's speech at Rome was one of the weakest challenges to an opponent yet made in the history of Georgia politics. It lacked fighting force and dealt in vague generalities, some of which puzzled Georgians.

Thompson charges, for instance, that Talmadge is connected with a "monopoly", which, it is alleged, controls Republican and Democratic politics in Georgia.

He certainly missed the mark on that one because the one apparent fact in Georgia today is that Georgians do not intend to be controlled by either the Democratic or the Republican Party. The people are seeking leadership that will place them solidly behind tried-out American principles. They are tired of pressure that seeks to mobilize them behind foolish innovations in government. They want to return to the security of the written law of the nation as embodied in the Constitution of the United States. They want to feel that they, as citizens, still have the right of ordering their own affairs. They want leadership that will speak and act for them in militant fashion in the increasingly urgent fight to preserve constitutional law and the rights of the states.

Herman Talmadge is providing such leadership and the people will

SMALL FARMERS

(THE NORTHEAST GEORGIAN)

Former Governor Herman Talmadge in a recent speech re-affirmed one stand he will take when he goes to the U. S. Senate. He will wage a campaign for the small farmers.

To those of us who have lived a reasonable time, the disappearance of the small farmers is a matter of grave concern. The drift of our economy has been toward large scale production and more and more costly use of mechanized implements. The small farmer, unless some

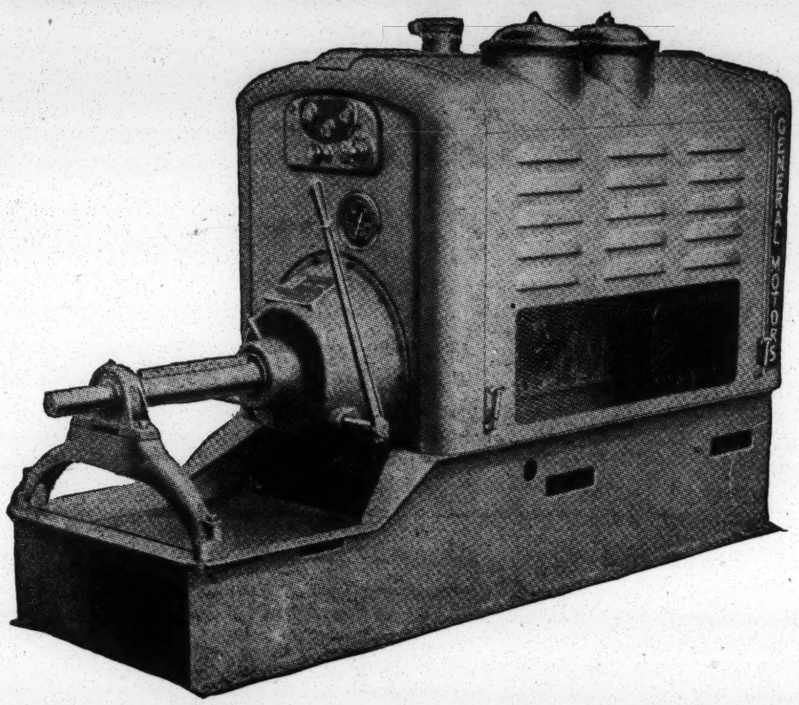
GM DIESEL IN EVERY FIELD AND INDUSTRY



Today the Diesel engine is at work in virtually every field and industry where power is required. In transportation it drives trucks and buses. In marine service it propels yachts, tugs and fishing vessels.

In construction it operates hoists, earth movers, rock crushers, bulldozers, graders and tractors. In mining it drives compressors, pumps and shovels. In the oil fields it drills wells and pumps oil.

In industry it delivers power for flour mills, cotton gins and sawmills, to name only a few. In farming it pulls plows, harrows and harvesters; pumps water, sprays orchards, cuts hay, grinds food and dehydrates alfalfa.

Since 1938—when the General Motors Series 71 Diesel was first put in service, it has proven to be ideally suited to all the above applications. Since that time, engines totalling over 60 million horsepower have been produced—outstanding evidence of its user acceptance.
